

Southern California Pavement Preservation Conference

April 25-26, 2006 • Diamond Bar, California

The Southern California Pavement Preservation Conference is designed to inform you about how your agency's roadway system can benefit from a pavement preservation program.

A pavement preservation program will enable your local agency to maintain its roads in better condition for less money over a longer life-span, while improving citizen satisfaction with the roads they use and pay for.

This conference will provide an opportunity for local agency pavement maintenance decision makers to meet with federal and state agency experts and industry representatives. Discover new innovations in pavement preservation and discuss methods used by other agencies to expand and improve pavement preservation programs in the region. Explore the types of preservation treatments used as part of a pavement preservation program and how the treatments can be integrated into comprehensive programs that involve pavement management systems.

This conference is intended for:

- local and state government public works personnel
- street supervisors and road foremen
- materials engineers and technicians
- pavement management engineers
- private consultants and others in industry

This conference will also include a vendor sponsored exhibit hall.

Registration

The general registration fee will be $75 for the two-day conference.

Exhibiting

The exhibitor fee will be $400 and will include two conference registrations and one 10' x 10' exhibit space.
